WARNINGS REGARDING POTENTIAL HAZARDS

Drowning Hazard

To avoid a child or pet drowning, always securely place and lock the lid to the RainStation. Never use the RainStation without the lid locked. Do not use the RainStation if the lid is broken, damaged, cracked or warped or if the lid cannot be securely placed on the barrel and locked. Never permit children or pets to play on, in or near the RainStation. Never place the RainStation near a deck, porch, stairs, chairs or other obstacles that could be used by children or pets to climb above, onto or into the RainStation. Never place the RainStation in a location that would allow a person or pet to fall from an elevated surface onto or into the RainStation from above (e.g. a location such as a deck or home built atop stilts or pylons).

The RainStation is not a toy. Do not leave children unattended near the RainStation.

Electrocution Hazard

If downspouts contain heating cables or other electrical conduits, serious injury, death or property damage could occur if precautions are not taken during installation to prevent electrocution or fire. Do not cut downspouts without first inspecting to ensure there are no cables or conduits present.

Tilting/Tipping Hazard

If not properly placed, the RainStation could tilt resulting in problems with the automatic overflow protection and the pooling of water, which may result in property damage or the creation of an ideal area for a mosquito breeding ground, PLEASE SEE INFESTATION WARNING. Improper placement of the RainStation could also result in its tipping over causing injury or death to people or pets, damage to property or damage to the RainStation itself. Never place the RainStation on a surface that is not solid and level.

An empty RainStation weighs significantly less than a RainStation containing water. Do not attempt to move a RainStation that contains water. Avoid shifting or movement during windy conditions or through incidental contact with the RainStation during seasonal use. Allow some water to remain in the RainStation to help stabilize it, except when winterizing the barrel as described in the step 12 of the instructions

Installation Hazard

Injury could occur during the installation process when handling sharp edges on the downspouts or cutting holes in the downspout for the FlexiFit Diverter or drain hose. To avoid injury, always wear proper gloves to help protect against cuts or scratches and safety glasses to avoid injury to the eyes.

To avoid damage to your home's siding, insert a protective shield (such as plywood sheeting) between the downspout and the siding to help protect against damage caused by improper installation.

Damage to the downspout could occur through improper hole placement, resulting in the need to replace the downspout. Please read the installation instructions carefully before drilling holes in the downspout. When measuring the downspout for hole placement, be sure to take into account any additional height requirement resulting from placing the RainStation on an elevated, solid and level base.

Contamination Hazard

Never allow people or animals to drink water from the RainStation. Never use the water from the RainStation for cooking, bathing, washing laundry or cleaning dishes and eating utensils or in any other manner that may result in ingestion of contaminated water. Water in the RainStation could become stagnant or contaminated with bacteria, microscopic parasites, viruses or other organic or inorganic compounds. Drinking stagnant or contaminated water may result in serious illness or death. Examples of diseases caused by drinking contaminated water include Cholera, Typhoid, Dysentery, Gastroenteritis, Hepatitis, Cryptosporidiosis and Giardiasis. For more information about these diseases, their symptoms or treatments, please consult a medical professional or contact the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization, or the Office of Global Health.

Infestation Hazard

Improper installation of the RainStation, using the RainStation without its lid, failing to properly place and secure the lid, using a RainStation that is cracked or damaged and failing to regularly clean gutters/downspouts and the diverter may result in mosquito larvae and other infestation. Mosquitos and other insects are capable of transmitting disease. Water is necessary for mosquito and other insect development, and containers of all types that hold water, including the RainStation, can potentially serve as habitat for mosquitos and other insects. Following the directions for proper placement and using the RainStation as described in these instructions is essential to reduce the risk of creating habitats for mosquitos and other insects.

Some of the diseases transmitted by mosquitos and other insects include West Nile Virus, various strains of encephalitis such as Eastern Equine Encephalitis, St. Louis Encephalitis, Western Equine Encephalitis, La Crosse Encephalitis, Japanese Encephalitis, Venezuelan Equine Encephalitis and other diseases such as Canine Heart Worm, Yellow Fever, Malaria, Chikungunya Fever, Semliki Forest Virus, Barmah Forest Virus, Ross River Virus, Sindbis Virus and Dengue Fever. For more information about mosquito and other insect transmitted diseases in your area, symptoms or treatments, please consult a medical professional or contact the Center for Disease Control and Prevention, the World Health Organization, or the Office of Global Health.
